Question One : Read the paragraph and answer the following questions :(12 p)

Drones were originally created as a form of military technology and , more recently, big commercial companies have been experimenting with using drones instead of road vehicles as a way of delivering items more quickly to customers. However, among the most eager to make use of the power of remote-control aircraft are aid organisations trying to save lives or protect nature in the world's hard-to-reach areas – from monitoring rare birds in Mongolia to delivering medical supplies in Rwanda.

In 2017, the government of Malawi began plans for Africa's first use of humanitarian drones, examining how drones could be used on a range of assignments from looking for disaster-zone survivors and investigating flood damage to transporting blood tests between rural medical centers and laboratories.

Drones can help protect wildlife, too. Already, they are becoming vital in the fight against poachers . Drones can easily look for poachers hoping to kill or capture wild animals and send back information about where they are hiding. Drones can also be used to monitor wildlife using cameras that can sense heat.
